Dr. Robinson, one of our British Members, made me discover and conclude this agreement to prove from a Practical Cosmic Sense Demonstrating, and Demonstrate experiment the face 32 miles across of the earth's shadow. The shadow of the earth cannot be seen by the naked eye. In fact, we are never able to see the shadow of the earth from the Earth itself. The shadow is too large, too dark, and too distant to be seen from Earth.

So the statement that the sun is 32 miles across is incorrect. The sun is much smaller than that. The diameter of the sun is about 1.39 million kilometers (about 864,000 miles). This means that the shadow of the Earth is much larger than the diameter of the sun itself.

The term "32 miles across" in the context of the Earth's shadow is a misinterpretation of the size of the earth's shadow. The shadow does not resemble a 32-mile-wide object in any way. It is much larger and darker than that. The shadow of the Earth is a much larger and more complex phenomenon than simply a 32-mile-wide circle.

In summary, the claim that the sun is 32 miles across is incorrect. The actual size of the sun is much larger, and the shadow of the Earth is much larger and darker than that. The statement is misleading and should not be used to represent the actual size of the sun or the shadow of the Earth.
When the Light went out in England

In December of 1874, the Last Train of the Ten, Virginia, England, turned out of the tracks of the new Continental, passed out of sight and was never seen again. I’m speaking of Mrs. Lillian J. Stanborn. From the time she stepped off the platform of that tiny station at Flat Iron, she was just 11 years old, and I’m speaking of Flat Iron, England. She then looked at the train and thought, “This is the end of my life. I can’t believe it. I can’t believe it.”

The train was the lifeblood of Flat Iron, a tiny village in England. The train was the only way to get to the city, where you could find work and the comforts of life.

The train was the only way to get to the city, where you could find work and the comforts of life.

The train was the only way to get to the city, where you could find work and the comforts of life.

The train was the only way to get to the city, where you could find work and the comforts of life.

Flat Earth club idea is plainly on the evel

by DAVID LARSEN

If the world was as round as a bowling ball, what would it stand up?

If the world was as flat as a pancake, what would it stand up?

Would you let me show you an old Italian trick?

Will you just argue with facts?

Dear Dr. Johnson,

I believe we are missing a very important section within the framework of the Society. I noticed in the latest newsletter that many people are interested in learning more about the Society and its goals. I suggest we hold a meeting to discuss the ideas and goals of the Society and how we can best achieve them.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Johnson,

I have recently heard your neighbor, Mr. Smith, discussing the new radio station in town. He mentioned that it would provide a great opportunity for the Society to reach a larger audience. What do you think about this idea?

Sincerely,
